“In fact, their first official support event as a volunteer corps was this hurricane disaster relief. Port Aransas has been identified as one of the group’s favorite camping places, and their volunteers didn’t fail to bring 100 percent to their efforts on the ground. They tackled debris and garbage removal, clearing property, hauling loads in or out (depending on what was required), and sourcing potable water and personal hygiene supplies. Being both versatile in their abilities as well as mobile, their members were able to travel to the scene as a well-organized Sister Corps, ready to assist and react quickly.”
